This book is completely different from any other book available on the subject of financing a college education. It was created to fill a major fundamental void in both parental guidance and student self-direction in college preparation. It is a must-read for every household, library, and guidance counselor working with youth.

David Murphy is a community college professor, author, youth leader, and father of four children. He and his wife Linda want to share their experiences in financing their children's college educations with minimal borrowing and raising a successful family.

12 Steps is written from a personal point of view, rather than cold facts. It provides worksheets and web sites to customize the book to each family's needs. 12 Steps is a fresh approach that begins with the student as a child and goes through college graduation. The author encourages families to better prepare their students to be successful in college by discussing valuable tips that may have been previously overlooked.

12 Steps is an improvement on many books on the market today. It covers the long-term picture and does not limit its scope to the senior year in high school and college years. It highlights students' responsibilities in preparing for most types of financial aid, a good work ethic, and planning beyond college life.

If you and your children are ready to reap the benefits of a college education with minimal borrowing – just read on and let's take action!
